

Dear Mr. Pai,

I am writing to express my deep concern about the FCC's proposal to roll back net neutrality. The unfiltered flow of information is essential for our democracy to function, and removing net neutrality has the real potential for abuse. Permitting ISPs and broadband carriers to filter content they do not like, or produced by competitors, is irresponsible and undermines our democracy. Net neutrality helps assure that every US citizen has equal access to information; undermining net neutrality has the potential to undermine our democracy.

Net neutrality benefits consumers and our democracy; undermining net neutrality only benefits large corporations. As someone in Washington who should be representing the interests of all US citizens, I plead with you to do everything in your power to maintain the current net neutrality policy.
